U.S. Representative Ed Case
Housing Legislative Accomplishments

November 2026

Hawaii's housing costs both owned and rented are unacceptably high, with median home values and rental costs consistently ranking among the highest in the United States. The causes and solutions are a mix of federal, state and local government and community responsibilities, and range from land use, tax and other policies to shipping, material and labor costs as well as disproportionate impacts on different community segments.

The federal government has a major role to play, ranging from national policy to programs and funding targeted at specific needs. This document provides a summary of Congressman Ed Case's actions on key bills, cosponsorships, votes, appropriations, joint letters, statements, and congressional delegations that impact housing affordability, resiliency and accessibility.
